Celebrate AASU!

Boy, it's pretty neat when even the president of the school sends out memos asking teachers to allow their students to skip class and play!

Well, maybe that's not exactly how he put it, but it looks as if the center of the AASU campus is going to be one big playground all day long this Thursday, October 10th.

There will be free food, free prizes, games and bands going on most of the day from 11:00 until early evening.

There will be games such as bungee run, speed pitch and a slam dunk obstacle course for those who want to get physical.

According to Dion Couch of Student Activities, instructors can expect a lot of noise from noon until well into the evening.

You won't even need lunch money, unless you're a vegetarian, as there will be free hot dogs and a lot of left over chilli.

If you are more serious minded, you can meet the Chancellor of the University System of Georgia who will be here to address us with congratulations on our newly acquired University status.

You can also visit organizational booths and learn more about clubs and school sponsored events like the family camp-out at Camp Blue Heron.

this October 4 through the 6th. You might even get to see yourself on the news at night, as this event will certainly be the best one going on in town!

You can sign up to join a club or organization, find out more about playing on an intramural team and be one of the first to view our new school mascot. And no, it's not another sting ray fiasco. This mascot is still a pirate, but we're told it's been updated to something everyone can relate to.

A modern day pirate? Hmm, wouldn't happen to be an IRS agent with an eye patch would it?

Come on out and see for yourself. Join the celebration. It's sure to be one they'll be talking about for years!

Schedule of Events

- 11:00 a.m. Student/Faculty Booths open

Editor's note

It has been a busy first week and we are pleased to announce a surprisingly large turnout for our first meeting held Tuesday, September 24th.

We hope to be showcasing the talent of our new writers in the next edition of the Inkwell due out October 17th.

We still have many writing assignments and are open to story ideas and suggestions.

Writers and artists are paid based on revenue from advertising sales - from as much as $5 to as little as nothing per article.

Sales reps are paid ten percent commission after first time advertising set up fees for all non-camera ready ads.

We do not have any permanent part-time positions and 98% of the work will be done outside the office.

We hope everyone enjoyed the first full color fall edition and hope to be adding more such issues as time and energy allow.

Don't forget about all the great events coming up on campus. It is a great way to get free food and meet new people even if you aren't interested in the event itself.

If you are in a club, on a sports team or are just concerned about common issues, call or write us at The Inkwell, 11935 Abercorn, Savannah, GA 31419. Phone# 927-5351.

We try to cover all events on campus and the Office of Public Relations does their best to keep us informed, but we still need your input. So, don't forget to inform us about your club meetings, paper presentations, sports events and bake sales.

All that we ask is that you let us know what's happening as soon in advance of the event as you can.

Remember, we will run a free ad for all club and department sponsored events as time and space allow.

Again, if you want to see more about a certain event, let us know more about it and we'll do our best to comply!

We Have a Winner!

We had eight correct guesses as to who our mystery professor was in the September 19th issue of the Inkwell.

Along with the correct guesses came about 5 incorrect guesses who thought our mystery professor was Yassi Saadatmand (3), Cyndee Geoffroy (1), and Jan Jones (1).

Janis Wells of the Student Affairs drew the name of Kim West from our cup of winners.

He wins two passes to any United Artist Theater in the area.

We haven't had any new entries to choose from, but if we do, we'll run the contest again.

Is NASA spending too much money?

By Robert Poole Jr.

I'm glad NASA is finally able to get undr way to bring Shannon Lucid home. She has been in orbit far longer than she figured or hoped. I understnad the importance of getting her home and all, and I know what it feels like to be stuck somewhere remote with my bads packed. However, what did they accomplish up there? They are going up there to bet her and drop somebody else off. Ever since man stepped foot on the moon, the United States has been getting deeper in debt. I know that NASA has contributed a lot to our society, believe me, I couldn't live without my microwave. But, couldn't our great nation cut back just a little? People are starving and we are in space. I'll say we are!

I read some figures concerning the space shuttle's preparations for the journey to bring Shannon Lucid home. These amounts deal only with the shuttle while it is on the ground: It is 3.5 miles from the launch pad to the shuttle's hangar. The shuttle mobile travels a t one mph. Each one-way trip to or from the hangar costs us apporximately $100,000 in diesel fuel alone, not to mention the labor costs, and I would think those workers get paid well. the past two hurricane scares resulted in two cancellations, which totalled foruteen miles traveled on the ground. this delay resulted in a fuel bill somewhere around $400,000 and the shuttle didn't go anywhere. I would think that Shannon Lucid could have tagged along with those Russians and later hitched a ride home with them at their expense. We could then have brought her home on the Concorde! If you have an opinion, please let me know.

Diane Amantea's Commentary

When White House presidential adviser Georgie-Porgie ("Aren't I adorable?") Stephanopolous appeared on various political talk-fests saying, "The president is going to run on his record," I rejoiced. "Yes," I cried in ecstasy. "Let's see him run on that record. He'll lose for sure."

The problem is, not enough people remember, or are even aware, of how dismal a record that is. For the edification of my reading public, I present to you a smattering of that record.

WELFARE REFORM: President Clinton is going around claiming credit for "keeping his 1992 promise to end welfare as we know it." He claims he's the one who gave states waivers in order to implement their own programs. However, let's look back at when he took office. Within one month, he appointed Donna Shalala the head of Health and Human Services, she who had served with Hillary Rodham Clinton on the board of the Children's Defense Fund, an organization staunchly opposed to ANY sort of welfare reform. To this person was given the task of implementing the president's so-called welfare reforms.

Thus, instead of expanding existing work requirements for recipients, Clinton's first budget proposed large increases in almost every type of welfare spending — food stamps, housing, Head Start, etc. In fact, his administration actually worked to abolish the 1988 "Family Support Act," a weak attempt at welfare reform which would have required some work from welfare recipients, affecting only some households, comprising 6 percent of the entire welfare caseloads.

When Clinton finally did propose a welfare reform it was this: no one would be required to work and states would be prohibited from requiring same. There was no time limit for benefits. In fact, no one would be required to work AT ALL for the first two years on welfare. Only 7 percent of the entire welfare caseload would be required to work by 1999, and then only 15 hours per week for about $15 per hour. The bill also allocated $4,000 in administrative overhead for each workfare participant. Not surprisingly, even Democrats couldn't get behind this pathetic sham of a bill and it was never even brought up for a vote!

As for those waivers to states Clinton crow's about, his henchwoman, Donna Shalala, rejected many of those conservative proposals from the states and greatly curtailed others. Each waiver was fought out painstakingly, line by line, word by word. In fact, both Massachusetts and California took a pass on the modified waivers eventually offered to them!

It was only in May of this year, when Clinton was seeking to steal Bob Dole's agenda, that he held up Governor Tommy Thompson's Wisconsin welfare program for high praise. And wouldn't you know it? In true Clinton fashion, within 24 hours of that speech, White House aide Harold Ickes stated that the Administration had serious reservations about the Wisconsin waiver. And the welfare flip-flops continued.

Next Week: More on Bill Clinton's "real record."

Are You a Poor Student?

By BJ English

Your Financial Aid is late. Your utility bill is past due and your credit balance is beginning to resemble the federal deficit as each churning moment passes by.

You look at all the other students and wonder where they get their money. How can they afford to eat out every day? The money it costs to purchase a chicken sandwich, coke and fries is enough to keep you in Ramen noodles and baked potatoes for a week.

How can they afford to drive new cars when you can't even afford to pay the insurance on an old one?

Your advisors act amazed when you tell them you can't afford to purchase a computer program that will tutor you on taking the GRE, and you hate to bring up the fact that you have already given up half a week's pay just to take the silly test anyway.

Your employer wants you to dress better but isn't willing to give you a raise so you can buy nicer clothes. The whole world seems to be against you.

However, you know that the time and money you sacrifice to go to college is going to be well worth it when you get that perfect high paying job you've always been dreaming of..... yeah, well being the manager at Hardee's does have it's perks and at least you'll never go hungry.

In the mean time, here are some tips on how you can tell you are a poor student, and how you can tell you've gone over the deep edge and need to seek professional help if only you can afford the money to do so.

Poor (P): People ask you where's the best restaurant in town and you point them toward McDonalds.

Really Poor (RP): People ask you where the best restaurant in town is and you point them toward the soup kitchen.

P: You realize your '76 Plymouth will reach the legal drinking age long before you do.

RP: You're already of legal drinking age but there are no liquor stores within walking distance of your apartment and your bicycle has a flat.

P: You collect all the reject pieces from a ceramics class and give them to your friends as Christmas or Birthday gifts.

RP: You collect all the rejects from ceramics class and offer to praise their work in public if they pay you.

P: You consider using the Inkwel as toilet paper when your supply at home runs out.

RP: You consider opening up a news stand on campus to try to sell the Inkwel to students as they pass you by for class.

P: You are seriously considering finding a new home for your dog because you can't afford the food and vet bills for it.

RP: You are seriously considering eating the dog's food when he isn't looking.

RRP: You are seriously considering eating the dog.

Pointers For Freshmen

By Anslee Willett

This is my fourth year at AASU, and too many times I have seen the following take place:

- It is not only important to make sure you are in the correct building when heading to class, but you should also play close attention to the room numbers. If you are still uncertain that you are in the right room, sit near the door so you will be saved some embarrassment when the professor announces that you are in a different class than you intended.
- You will notice many golf carts traveling about the campus. Many of the drivers maneuver the carts on the sidewalks. If you should find yourself in front of an oncoming cart, do not try to out-walk it, as you are sure to lose. Instead, kindly step aside. They will show you the same courtesy by not running you over when you are not polite.

- Yes, the campus is marked with pedestrian crosswalks. However, due to students who are in quite a hurry to get their daily dose of indigestion from Taco Bell, this does not mean you should not be alert while using a pedestrian crosswalk. You should only use one without caution if you happen to be feeling lucky that day.

• The yellow lines at the end of each row in the main parking lot are not parking spaces, especially if the lot is half empty. You may be late for class from time to time, and it will be worth your effort to park in a parking space and walk those hundred of few hundred yards. If you don't mind finding an index-sized piece of paper under your windshield wiper, feel free to park on the yellow lines.

I hope you will find these few pointers helpful this upcoming year. And one more thing, a notebook is usually an important part of class.

College Women Short-changed on Sleep

By Colleen DeBaise
College Press Services

CHICAGO-- Tamara Hahn doesn't have time to sleep.

Hahn, a 20 year old junior at the University of Illinois at Chicago, juggles a full class load, softball practice and a part-time job at a sandwich shop.

"During the [softball] season, I get no sleep," says Hahn, as she spreads mustard on a roast beef sandwich. "It's hard to go to classes sometime. It's hard to pay attention."

Weekends are a time to catch up on sleep, she says, although sometime "I try to make up my sleep right after practice, but that's when I have to do work or study."

"It's really hard," she adds.

An increasing number of college students, like Hahn, are spending less time snoozing and more time feeling tired and listless, according to recent studies.

In a report in the journal Sleep, scientists speculate that Americans aren't getting enough sleep. People prioritize all their time for work, family, food, exercise and occasionally fun, while sacrificing their need for sleep.

Lead study author Donald Bliwise, director of the Sleep Disorders Center at Emory University Medical School, claims that contemporary Americans are getting less sleep and feeling worse than their grandparents did.

The report compared the results of a mental health survey of 1,200 healthy adults living in the Midwest in the 1930's to a similar sample in the 1980's and found that there is a surge in the number of people who report being fatigued, which may indicate they have had insufficient sleep.

An Elmhurst College study of 82 undergraduates, found that similar percentages of women and men said they required at least 7 to 8 hours of sleep to function normally, but only 38 percent of women, compared to 51 percent of men, reported sleeping less than 6 1/2 hours per night.

The survey showed that women went to bed earlier on week nights but stayed up later than men on the weekends. Men on the other hand stayed up later on weeknights and went to bed earlier on weekends.

Many women said they try to catch up on their sleep on weekends. Nearly 40% of the women surveyed slept past 10 a.m. on weekends compared to 26% of men.

"Napping and sleeping in on weekends is counter productive," says Sexton-Radek. "Napping behavior needs are complex. While the body craves sleep, the urge to sleep must be ignored to maintain a healthy, synchronized sleep cycle."

Sexton-Radek says one of the most important habits for good sleep is to go to bed and wake up at the same time each day. "This will give you a consistent rhythm and will synchronize your biological clocks," she says.

Almost all, 77 out of 82 students, reported needing an alarm clock to wake up. About 20 percent experienced insomnia at times.

Hey, That Gray Haired Lady in my class is old enough to be the teacher!

By BJ English

"What does that old lady want to come to school for? By the time she gets her degree she'll be dead!" came the words of my 17 year old friend who is starting college in her senior year of high school.

"She must be at least 85!" Well, that's better than the one I heard from my elementary school friend who commented, "Some really old man came looking for you."

It turned out the man she was referring to was younger than I. Talk about your complexes....

Why does it seem that the younger we are, the older "old people" seem to be, and the older we are, the younger "young people" seem to be.

More than likely, the 85 year old lady my friend was speaking of was closer to her sixties than her eighties.

I tried to explain to her that some people enjoyed coming to school to learn new things no matter what their age and that older people could often add enlightenment to a class based on real world experiences but I think the point was mute. Either that, or she'd gone deaf by listening to hard rock at decibels that would put a jet engine to shame.

I can't really blame her for thinking that gray hair meant the end of the world was close at hand. It wasn't so long ago that I thought I would never live past 30, so it was okay to make fun of those people who did.

Like many young people, I thought I was impervious to the ravages of time, and as my 25th birthday rolled uneventfully past, I was shocked to realize I was now a quarter of a century old and had not accomplished nearly as much as I had thought I would. To make matters worse, it looked as if I would probably live to the ripe old age of 40!

This wasn't fair. I was not supposed to grow old like everyone else. I was not supposed to get wrinkles and gray hairs. I was not supposed to have to urinate every two hours or get hemorrhoids and hot flashes. That only happened to old people who didn't take care of themselves.

I wasn't supposed to get fat and out of shape, or have trouble reading the fine print on the back of jewelry. I wasn't supposed to mismatch the navy socks with the black. I especially wasn't supposed to be the kind of adult who corrected kids for having too much fun, nor begin my sentences with phrases like, "When I was your age..."

My mother warned me that age would catch up to me, but I didn't believe her. Now I realize why she was smiling so mysteriously when she said those prophetic words, "Your time will come."

Whether you are 17 or 70, your time WILL come and how you treat people now will in part reflect how you are treated in the future.

That "85 year old lady" on her last legs might well turn out to be the owner of a corporation that you plan to work for in future and that wimpy looking guy that's shy, "ugly" and 100 pounds overweight, may go on to become a millionaire who finds a cure for cancer.

Judging people by their age, skin color, speech and looks is a good way to paint yourself into a corner from which you cannot escape without leaving a trail of paint to point your mistake out to others.

The more different someone is from you, the more you stand to learn something new. So next time you see a purple haired nymph with a ring pierced through her nose, or an 85 year old lady that looks like she should be home knitting an afghan, remember that the world does not center around your idea of normalcy and perfection.

That 85 year old lady may not be the teacher, but she can sure teach you a lot about life. That odd looking creature seemingly dressed for Halloween could probably teach you a few things too, but experience in life is the best teacher and just think of how far advanced your knowledge would be if you could learn from someone that has not only studied history, but lived it.

Setting up age barriers limits you from experiencing all levels of life. No matter how young you are now, you will be older in the future, and aging doesn't have to be a scary thing. The better prepared you are for what is to come, the more you'll realize that growing old isn't as bad as it seems.

As for all you "old timers" out there, ask yourself whether you are judging today's youth objectively or based on a sense of longing for those days when you were free to say, think and act as you pleased without having to worry so much about what society would think of you or whether you would be fired for being a free thinker and not a drone.

We all have a lot to learn from each other. We can all be teachers, whether our hair is gray, bleached blond or purple.

House Approves Plan To Encourage Crime Reporting

By Charles Dervarics
College Press Service

WASHINGTON— The U.S. House of Representatives unanimously called on the Department of Education Sept. 11 to step up enforcement of federal regulation that encourage accurate, open reporting of crime on college campuses.

The resolution, which was approved 413-0, calls on the Department of Education to make monitoring and compliance with the law a "priority" for colleges and universities. The resolution followed a June congressional hearing at which safety advocates and lawmakers criticized the department for lax enforcement of the 1990 Campus Security Act.

"If campus crime is not a priority, it will be soon," said Rep. Howard "Buck" McKeon, R-Calif., chairman of the House Subcommittee on Post-Secondary Education and Training and a sponsor of the resolution, H.R. 470.

The resolution is not binding, but McKeon and other lawmakers said they will consider more far-reaching requirements if the Department of Education does not respond to the House request.

The 6-year-old Campus Security Act requires colleges to collect annual information on murder, forcible and non-forcible sex offenses, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, and motor vehicle theft and distribute a report to the public. Colleges also are to provide timely warning to students about potential threats on their campuses.

Nearly all colleges provide an annual report, but Education officials have never reviewed or compiled the data, citing a lack of funds and staff. The department also is a year late in sending a congressionally mandated report on campus crime to Congress.

Safety advocates and press organizations also say many institutions regularly underreport crime information.

"The Campus Security Act of 1990 is not working," said Mark Goodman, executive director of the Student Press Law Center. Based on his work with student newspaper editors, Goodman said he believes "the majority of schools routinely underreport the number of serious criminal incidents that occur on campus."

Much of the underreporting occurs because crimes reported to deans of students and other administrators are not reported to a college's public-safety office that compiles the annual study, advocates claim.

The resolution drew support from both sides of the political aisle, with conservatives who usually oppose government intervention agreeing with the need to increase enforcement.

"Students should be worrying about exams and term papers, not their personal safety on campus," said Rep. Phil English, R-Pa. Rep. Elizabeth Furse, D-Ohio, added that students, faculty, staff and the surrounding community "have a right to know" accurate crime rates.

The chairman of the House Economic and Educational Opportunities Committee also threatened more action if the Department of Education does not take the resolution seriously.

"If you do not enforce [the Campus Security Act], we will find ways to make sure you do," said Rep. William Goodling, R-Pa., who helped guide the Campus Security Act through Congress six years ago.

Aides said Congress could tackle wider reforms next year when it reauthorizes the Higher Education Act, the federal law that governs most federal programs affecting colleges and universities. One option under consideration is requiring colleges to maintain an open daily public log listing the time, date and location of campus crimes and any arrest information.

Nearly 40 lawmakers already cosponsor this plan, known as the Open Campus Police Logs Act. The House held a hearing on this bill in June, though no action is expected until next year.

Planned Parenthood To Study Drug-Induced Abortions

By College Press Service

NEW YORK—Planned Parenthood announced Sept. 11 that many of its clinics will offer a drug-induced form of abortion this fall as part of a national study.

The study on early medical abortions has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration and involves methotrexate and misoprostol, two drugs currently used to treat cancer, arthritis and other conditions.

Planned Parenthood said it hopes the study will persuade the FDA to deem the drugs "safe and effective" as an abortion method.

During the procedure, a woman no more than seven weeks pregnant is injected with methotrexate, which stops the development of the placenta and embryo. Five to seven days later, the patient receives intravaginal doses of misoprostol, which causes the uterus to contract and expel the fetus.

In some cases, if abortion does not occur after seven days, the patient is given a second dose of misoprostol.

"We are gratified that the FDA is allowing us to move forward with our study of medical abortion," said Gloria Feldt, president of Planned Parenthood.

The two-drug abortion method already is in use in Europe and China. The FDA currently is considering whether to approve RU-486, or the abortion pill, also used in Europe, Feldt said.

"In the foreseeable future, women will likely soon have a choice of two new medical options for ending unwanted pregnancies—ending them early, and without surgery," she said. "That is great news for women's health."

The National Right to Life Committee has condemned the two-drug abortion method, stressing that it stops the heart of an unborn child and may cause complications to the mother.

A study published last August in the New England Journal of medicine concluded the method "represents a safe and effective alternative to invasive methods of early pregnancy."

REMINDER!!!

The Academic Computing Lab will temporarily remain in Ashmore Hall (formerly Health Professions bldg.) rooms 224/225 for Fall quarter. The newly renovated lab facility in the Memorial Center Annex should be ready Winter quarter. Even now, the memory in both MAC's and PC's have been upgraded to have 16 MB of memory. The harddrives in the MAC's have been upgraded to 500 MB. Lab hours are as follows:

Monday - Thursday	7:30am - 11:00pm
Friday	7:30am - 5:00pm
Saturday	12:00pm - 5:00pm
Sunday	2:00pm - 11:00pm

You should keep at least one car length between your car and the car ahead for every ten miles per hour of speed.

Rising air cools about 5.5 degrees F per 1,000 feet. Sinking air warms at the same rate.

Teacher Prep Needs Overhaul, Report Finds

By College Press Service

Washington—Not just students, but teachers must achieve higher standards if school reform is going to succeed, according to a report released Sept. 12.

The report, issued by the National Commission on Teaching & America's Future, said colleges must do a better job of training perspective teachers so they can handle such tasks as computer instruction and working with children with learning disabilities.

The report, "What Matters Most: Teaching For America's Future," is the result of a two-year study of school, college and state-government practices that hinder children's learning. It urges colleges to make teacher education a five-year program, which would require four years of study in a particular discipline followed by a year of intensive work in schools.

It also asks that legislators and educators require all colleges of education to meet the standards of the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education by 2006 or be closed.

According to the report:

- More than 40 states allow districts to hire teachers who have not met basic requirements.

- More than 12 percent of new teachers begin without any training, while another 14 percent have not met state standards.

- Thirty percent of beginning teachers leave the profession within three to five years of entering.

- Fewer than 75 percent of all teachers have studied child development and have degrees in their teaching subject areas.

- "No more hiring unqualified teachers on the sly," the report says. "No more nods and winks at teacher education programs that fail to prepare teachers properly. No more tolerance for incompetence in the classroom."

According to the report, because of changing demographics, the nation must replace half of teacher workforce within 10 years. The Education Department predicts the public school teaching force will grow from 2.8 million teachers in 1991 to 3.3 million by 2002.

Smart Shopping Can Save Money On Textbooks Experts Say

By Colleen Debaise
College Press Service

University of Iowa freshman Sharon Monaghan had just trudged back to her dorm room with a heavy sack of textbooks and a mild case of sticker shock.

"This one book alone cost $40," said Monaghan, pointing to a text for a music appreciation class. "I couldn't believe it."

On average, college students spend about $600 each school year on books and supplies, according to Martha Love, information analyst for the National Association of College Stores.

The trick is getting the most for your money. The association offers a number of tips for shopping wisely at the campus bookstore.

In particular, freshmen might be startled by the costs of textbooks on their first book buying trip, Love said.

Up until college, "you go to school, your textbooks are there," she said. There's no previous buying experience with that.

The association has conducted surveys and found that by the senior year, many students have devised strategies to save money on books, Love said.

Freshmen, on the other hand, "were much more compelled to buy anything the professor said," she said.

"Freshmen don't know the town and what other options they may have," Michelle Riche, a University of California-Santa Cruz junior said. "On my campus there is the mega-bookstore that charges top dollars for books. First-year students are more likely to go there because they want to make sure they buy the right issued of a book."

But after two years on campus, Riche said she is more likely to check out other avenues.

For example, at UC, there is an independent student organization and a local bookstore that sell some of the same textbooks required for classes.

"Another good thing to do is a lot of people sell their books from the previous year for about half the price," she said.

Love said there are two schools of thought when it comes to buying books for class.

Some students recommend going to class first, before you buy your books. That way, you might discover that a roommate or friend is in the same class and could share a book with you, Love said.

Also check with friends to see if they've taken the course and can loan you their book or tell you whether the book was necessary or not.

Often you can get by with an earlier edition of a new book or ask if the professor will put a copy of the book on loan at the library.

Another option is to buy books early, before class starts so that you can be the first to pick up a used copy of the book if it is not a new edition. But first, make sure the bookstore will accept return of used books without a drop/add card. That way you can return the book if you don't need it.

Some professors are helping students out by supplying their own text for the course and by putting reading material on reserve in the library.

A few students have resorted to copying pages out of another student's textbook after finding it was cheaper than paying for the new text itself, but students should be reminded that this is against copyright laws and is basically illegal without permission of the publisher.

Above all, find out your bookstore's policy on returned books. In order to receive a full refund, most bookstores require that you do not remove the book from its protective wrapping and do not write or mark in the books.

Many students prefer to keep their textbooks rather than trade them in for the incredibly low sums the book buy back programs offer. Some donate their books to area high schools and libraries.

If you think high prices on textbooks is something new, think again. Love states that textbooks have been overpriced since 1915.

Maybe that's an issue President Clinton should raise in his reelection campaign. What do you think?

Protecting Yourself Against Gym Germs

(NAPS)—More and more people these days are headed to their local gym for a daily workout routine. Fitness, it seems, is no longer just a craze but more of a way of life.

With such a large number of people crowding into health clubs and spas across the country, the chance for spreading germs and picking them up increases dramatically. After all, germs have an easier time breeding in warm, moist climates, such as locker rooms, communal shower stalls, whirlpools, steam rooms and swimming pools, than most other places. Germs also have an easy time living in sweaty clothes, which can cause a number of skin infections. Pack an antibacterial body wash in your gym bag for a post-work-

The Baptist Student Union Has Hypocrites! Prayer In The Public Schools

by Rev. Chris Fuller

Do you believe it? The Baptist Student Union, of all places, has people who say one thing and do another! It's a shame and someone ought to do something about it! Christians especially should not be hypocritical. I know it, you know it, everyone knows that people who claim to be Christians should exhibit a better example! Right?

If there is one charge I hear consistently, it's that people do not commit to a church or a Christian organization because that group has hypocrites. I'm sure that you have heard this, maybe you have even stated this charge yourself. Well, you are correct! I'm sorry to disappoint you, but every Christian, every do-gooder, every civic-minded, every nonprofit organization has hypocrites! Some groups may have more and some may have less, but all have been hypocritical at one point or another. I hope this disturbs you.

This disturbs me because I now know that every Christian person has been hypocritical and will continue to be hypocritical. I hate hypocrites. In fact, I do not know anyone who proudly claims to be a hypocrite. No child goes to bed at night and whispers to mom before going to sleep that they want to be a hypocrite when they grow up. Politicians avoid the "h" label with vigor. Christians avoid this word with particular disdain because Jesus hates hypocrites so much. But the awful truth is that all Christians are hypocrites.

What may be distressing to you as this article continues is that you may realize that you too are a hypocrite. All of us say who we are and what we do with our lips, and we have moments where our lives do not match up with the talk. Even if you are not a Christian or a believer in any faith, you are a hypocrite. I can say this with confidence. If you are honest with yourself, you will realize that you and everyone else has standards or expectations for themselves. They may be stated or unstated, but they exist. And just as surely as they exist; they are compromised and broken. You cannot live a perfect, non-hypocritical life no matter how hard you try.

The only difference then between a Christian and non-Christian is that the Christian realizes they can not be perfect and wants to be, and the non-Christian thinks they can be perfect or does not care. Christians believe there was only one perfect person, Jesus. We try to follow his example. Unfortunately, we are hypocrites. Fortunately, we are forgiven when we act hypocritically.

Want to talk about it? The BSU meets every Thursday noon for a free lunch. We are located between the Fine Arts Hall and Publix on Abercorn. See ya there!

This is a topic that generates a great deal more heat than light. A number of points need to be reviewed concerning prayer and other religious rituals in school:

- Contrary to generally held belief, school prayer is not forbidden in public schools. A student can come early to class, sit quietly, and pray silently. They can legally organize a prayer group in any school that permits secular clubs. Similarly, with some discipline, a student can pray upon rising, as a family before leaving home, even (if they can concentrate over the noise) in a school bus, etc

- there is a sizable minority of parents (and by implication, children) who are following religions other than Christianity or who follow no religion at all. They find an enforced Christian prayer to be deeply offensive, and an attack on their freedom of religion.
- many deeply Christian and other religious parents and children who pray regularly regard enforced, state written prayers to be deeply offensive and a violation of fundamental human rights.

- some jurisdictions have allowed objecting students to leave the room and thus be excused from reciting a prayer. However, this action inevitably subjects the students to harassment by their peers.

- to require students to recite a Christian prayer implies state recognition of Christianity as a religion of special status in the country. This is interpreted by many that religions other than Christianity are inferior. That promotes conflict among faith groups and intolerance of minority religions.
- attempting to decide what prayers should be used can result in inter-denominational conflict among Christians. More conservative groups might ask for prayers which deal with sin and the necessity of being "saved".

Mainstream groups may want to write prayers which emphasize the love of God.

- The freedom for parents and a school system to require children to recite a state-written prayer conflicts with the rights of parents and students who wish freedom from compulsory prayer.

- Some jurisdictions have reached various compromises that balance the rights and desires of opposing groups: some schools institute a moment of silence that students can use to pray silently, or meditate, or simply center themselves.

- Most schools allow any interested students to gather elsewhere in the school to pray as a group.

- Some school systems have a list of prayers drawn from a variety of religions that are found in the state or province. These prayers are read in sequence by a volunteer. Students are not required to recite the words; they can simply remain silent. This approach has a valuable educational component. Students learn a little about many religions. They realize that there are many different religions in the world and that society recognizes that all have worth.

What the Bible Says about Public Prayer:

The ultimate test for a Christian is "what Jesus says about prayer". The author of the book of Matthew (name unknown) stated this clearly:

Matt. 6:5 "And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men..."

Matt. 6:6 "...when thou prayest, enter into thy closet and when thou has shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret..."

The reference to go into thy closet has been translated in other versions of the Bible as go into your inner room; go away by yourself, all alone and go into your room.

The message is clearly that:

- prayers in public where other people are present is not allowed.
- prayers should be an intensely personal event between a person and their God; no one else should be present.
- prayers should not be given in groups, whether at school, in church, in synagogue, or in a legislature.

A bible-believing Christian would appear to be required to oppose school and other public prayer.

A Possible School Prayer Compromise:

One WWW site, the Natural Prayer Project recommends that schools follow a suggestion made by Colin Powell. He recommends a simple moment of silence. Students would then have the right to pray, meditate, contemplate, or study. A book "An Outrageous Idea: We need a miracle" written by Patty Jo Cornish and illustrated by James Hubbell promotes this concept. She writes:

"We have forgotten that we are all in this together. And, we keep separating ourselves from ourselves, by color, by football teams, by clothes, by money, by creed, by greed, by boundaries, by age, and so on and on. We need something to pull us all together. Natural Prayer could be that miracle. It includes everyone, even the nonbelievers."

Med Students Study the art of Faith Healing

By College Press Service

WASHINGTON--Most med students expect to take chemistry, anatomy and other hard sciences, but religion....

Six medical schools have received a $10,000 John Templeton Foundation grant to be used to teach medical students how to incorporate spirituality into clinical care.

S. Bryant Kendrick Jr., an ordained minister and faculty member at Wake Forest University's school of medicine, one of the recipients of the grant, said the money will be used at his school "to sensitize these students to the active role religion plays in peoples' lives."

The grant will be used to set up a new course on faith and medical practice for first and second year students, said Kendrick.

"It's as important as good nutrition and exercise," he said. "Contemplative medicine is like a good drug. The body was made for prayer."

Increasingly the medical community is acknowledging links between faith and healing. At the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Sciences earlier this year, researchers who reviewed 212 studies said they found three-fourths showed religious commitment had a positive effect on health.

Natasha's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're being way too pushy, especially where your significant other is concerned. Try to be more sensitive and listen to this person's concerns. If not, you'll rue the day, as they say. This weekend, have friends over for a get-together.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You are in too much of a hurry this week and could miss an important detail on a work project. In fact, you won't be able to complete it correctly. This won't escape the eye of a disapproving boss.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family interests take the forefront this week. However, you need to put a lid on those extravagant urges you're having. Sometimes, you can be overly generous with money which can lead to financial problems for you. Remember, you don't always have to be "Good Time Charlie."

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be sure that whatever you do at work is executed this week in a thorough, thoughtful manner. As a result, you receive recognition for your hard work. Business and pleasure combine favorably over the weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You have a hard time during the early part of the week getting along with someone who refuses even to consider your point of view. If you bide your time, this person ultimately comes around.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be willing to meet that special someone halfway in order to smooth things over in the relationships. Despite such difficulties, it's a great week for socializing. This weekend, singles attract romantic introductions.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The accent this week is on togetherness, particularly in the area of love and romance. Business advice comes from an unexpected source, but it's quite sound nonetheless. Patience is needed with family members over the weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Before you plunge right in and give a friend unsolicited advice, bite your tongue! Your interference isn't welcome or appreciated. Stay out of the fray! This weekend, pursue a pet hobby.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Thanks to the efforts of an old friend, you are able to get through a sticky situation on the home front. Since this person knows all the players involved, an equitable solution is achieved by week's end. The weekend promises restful activities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're being too domineering at work, and co-workers are uncooperative as a result. Back off and try a more gentle approach. A family member is looking to you for advice on a delicate issue this weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unexpected financial boon is likely this week. However, that doesn't mean it's time to rush out and spend, spend, spend! Someone close to you at home this weekend is in a depressed state and could use some cheer from you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your charm is your ally in getting what you want in business. Be sure you keep sight of your goals and don't be tripped up by inconsequential details. A personality conflict could crop up later in the week at work.

Who's Who Applications

You do not have to have a 3.8 G.P.A. and be an officer in five organizations to be considered for Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities. However, a good G.P.A. and some genuine service or contribution to campus life could do the trick.

Unlike the Silver 'A' awards for Academics and Service, which recognize outstanding achievement or contributions in one or the other, Armstrong has always nominated students for Who's Who who represent a well rounded combination of campus involvement and good academic standing.

Students who will graduate during 1997 and would like to be considered for recognition in the 1997 edition of Who's Who must complete an application available from the Student Activities Office by Thursday, October 24. Applicants must also dit for a brief interview with the Student Activities Committee October 29, 30, or 31.

Free Book Gives Alzheimer's Caregiving Tips

(NAPS)—A new, comprehensive guidebook about caring for a loved one with Alzheimer's disease is available free-of-charge.

At the Heart of Alzheimer's is an invaluable resource that offers tips, suggestions and personal anecdotes that reveal fresh insight into the complicated, often troubling personality and behavior patterns demonstrated by individuals with Alzheimer's disease.

Written under the direction of Manor HealthCare Corp., the nation's largest provider of care for individuals with Alzheimer's disease, At the Heart of Alzheimer's reflects, with sensitivity and compassion, vast amounts of information gathered through extensive interviews with individuals afflicted with Alzheimer's and their experienced caregivers.

To receive a free copy of the 152-page book entitled At the Heart of Alzheimer's, contact Manor HealthCare, at 1-800-979-CARE.

A Book Worth Buying

By: Anslee Willett

There is a fine book that contains a world of information about life. H. Jackson Brown, Jr.'s Live and Learn and Pass It On is a collection of quotes from people ages five to ninety-five. The book was so successful that a second volume was published. Here are a few samples from it:

- on comic events: "I've learned that you should never take out your teeth when flushing the commode."

- on comforting friends: "I've learned that one of the best things I can give a hurting friend is my presence, not my words."

- on college: "I've learned that students who pay their own way through college never flunk out."

- on reality: "I've learned that no matter how much I care, sometimes some people just don't care back."

- on marriage: "I've learned that my wife's cooking is always good, no matter how bad it is."

- on relationships: "I've learned that you should never put off saying, 'I love you,' in any relationship as long as you sincerely mean it. Otherwise you may spend the rest of your life regretting it."

I have both volumes of Live and Learn and Pass It On, and I find myself flipping through each quite often. I have also learned that either volume makes a great gift. In fact, I have recently mailed a copy of volume two to a friend in Colorado.

Each volume costs $5.95 — a small price for something that is sure to give you insight into your own life.
